Stankevicius reports having helped clients to raise $500M in 2018

Dubai, United Arab Emirates, December 12, 2018 - Stankevicius PR and advertising firm have been working closely with blockchain companies throughout the year and assisted them in getting positive public company image which has successfully led to investors' interest. Stankevicius worked with over 200 blockchain companies in 2018.

When it comes to capital raising online, public relations is a fundamental business success metric towards investor relations. Either the company is raising private capital from venture capitalists or angel investors, or the company is raising through crowdfunding- every investor, small or big, wants to feel assured that they invest their money in the right company.

Building a company image online is very important not just for investor sake but for client acquisitions and international market expansion. Regardless of the company type at the end of the day that company is trying to sell something to people. Before making the purchase decision, clients and consumers do their analysis, research and due diligence of the company and the product, and whether its an online review or an article in a magazine or newspaper- everything matters.

A company has to make sure to have as much positive information about them on the internet as possible. This is the primary success metric for daily sales and successful investor relations.

Stankevicius company provides clients with professional PR services. If you feel that your company could perform better locally or internationally contact Stankevicius and get professional consulting on how to improve your company's public image strategy.
